ABSTRACT

Systems and methods for providing search results are described. In one described system, a term is received in an input field. An article index is searched for an article identifier associated with the term. The article identifier is associated with an article. The article identifier is received and caused to be output in a transient menu associated with the input field.